Daughter of British Premier, who, with her mother, was the subject of Watson's poem, 'The Woman With the Serpent's Tongue.' According to the poet, the mother furnished the physical and the daughter the mental attributes described.

'POET WATSON WANTED A TITLE; HE IS A CAD,' SAYS MISS ASQUITH

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Miss Violet Asquith, daughter of the Prime Minister, explains to the AMERICAN correspondent that she does not care to dignify William Watson, the poet, by replying to his statements concerning herself and her stepmother. Miss Asquith's explanation is that she is not interested in the fact that he has not and all his influence to gain publicity, and she has made her father's life miserable with his persistent denunciations and lies. She said that she had written a letter to Watson, but that it had been destroyed. She said that she had written a letter to Watson, but that it had been destroyed. WIDOW WITNESS AT HEARING OF HATTIE LE BLANC

Girl Held Without Bail for Action of the Grand Jury in the Waltham Tragedy.

Hattie Le Blanc was held for the action of the Grand Jury on the charge of having murdered Clarence E. Glover today in the Juvenile Court at Waltham. The girl was taken back to the East Cambridge jail. As she was leaving the courthouse she glanced and smiled at the group of reporters and others who were on the sidewalk. The case will be considered by the January Grand Jury in East Cambridge.

The feature of the preliminary trial today was the testimony of Mrs. Edith Marie Glover, the widow of the murdered man. She was on the witness stand fifty-five minutes, exactly the time it required her to tell her story at the inquest. Hattie Le Blanc and her lawyers heard her story for the first time.

How Mrs. Glover accounted for her time on the witness stand, and for the fact that Hattie Le Blanc was in her home at 171, Nichols Avenue, Waltham, Mass., on the night of the murder, was told by her story at the inquest. Hattie Le Blanc and her lawyers heard her story for the first time.

Objection Is Sustained. Mrs. Glover was not admitted to the hearing. She was not allowed to see Hattie Le Blanc. She was not allowed to see Hattie Le Blanc.

Declared Four Times "HATTIE LE BLANC DID IT". In his closing statement, officially taken before Judge of the Peace LeBlanc, in the presence of several witnesses, who were sworn by the jury, Clarence E. Glover repeated for the fourth time that Hattie Le Blanc shot him.

Where Did the Shooting Occur? Q. Where did you meet the girl? A. I met her at the corner of the street and the corner of the street. I met her at the corner of the street and the corner of the street.

Girl Is Cheerful. The woman seen in the hearing had a but with a white feather in her hair. Hattie Le Blanc did not have a white feather in her hair.

The Dyspepsia Of Old Age

Strong Digestion and an Adequate Nutrition Invariably Mean a Long and Healthy Life.

There is a process known as metabolism going on constantly in the body, and by which the tissues are built up, and after having served their purpose in the physical economy are torn down and cast off.

So long as the due relation between waste and supply is maintained, no irritation and the various organs of the body are continued. But after middle life and in old age comes a time when waste exceeds supply, and when the various elements which constitute the different tissues of the body are no longer held in their proper proportion, and the principle of life itself becomes endangered, the body no longer having power to assimilate new material as it came.

An old age comes on, all the functions gradually fall, especially those of digestion, absorption and assimilation, and the system being deprived of the full quota of nutrient, slowly wears out. If the nutritive and digestive processes of old people could be maintained unimpaired, life could be prolonged almost indefinitely.

There are many old persons in whom stomachs, the master function almost entirely suspended. When the trouble occurs, the problem is to digest the food and not allow it to pass on to the stomach. Here is just one way to reach this end, and that is to supply the stomach with a powerful digestive substance to take the place of the juices which it fails to secrete naturally.

This substance there is nothing superior to STANTON'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS to medical science, and it is a reliable and thoroughly efficient substitute for the natural gastric juice that it two or three are taken after each meal the food will be digested in its complete manner, and the natural digestive fluids will never be missed.

Stanton's Dyspepsia Tablets should be used by all old and middle aged persons, in order to prevent the troubles of the dyspepsia of old age. Through their use complete digestion of the food is assured, with a consequent increased nutrition of the body, and a saving of the sensibility and decrements of old age.

This remedy is, however, not only need for the indigestion of old age, but is also applicable to the troubles of the dyspepsia of old age. Through their use complete digestion of the food is assured, with a consequent increased nutrition of the body, and a saving of the sensibility and decrements of old age.

A sample package will be sent you if you will forward your name and address to the A. A. Stewart Company, 150 Stuart Building, Marshall, Mich.

The Man Who Holds
Five Championships

He Has Obtained All of Them at the Expense of His Future

Copyright, 1909, by American Journal-Examiner

In a great business organization is a young man who holds the "office championship" in golf, pool, billiards, long-distance walking and chess.

Naturally, he is something of a celebrity, and is more or less looked up to by the office boys and the younger employees, who have yet to learn that the only competition worth entering is the competition to succeed in one's particular calling.

This champion has worked hard to obtain his five-fold eminence—but his hard work is all done OUTSIDE THE OFFICE.

Of course his employers are not in the least interested in the fact that he plays a brilliant game of pool, for they are too busy with their own affairs to sit in a billiard room and watch him play.

They care as little for his prowess in the other games.

But they ARE interested in the way he does his work, and they would be ready to reward him liberally if he was as eager to win a championship in that as he is in golf or chess.

Not being a professional pool player, this game-loving youth will of course never be able to compete with real professionals, and his "office pool championship" would probably provoke the mirth of even the sickly, cigarette-smoking lingers in a country poolroom.

De Oro, the great Cuban pool player, who for years held the championship of the world, won it by playing for many hours daily, and by studying the game with as careful attention as most men study their professions.

De Oro began originally to play because he possessed an unusually accurate eye and marvellous muscular hands. The lack of either of these requisites would have put the championship beyond his reach, despite all his study and practice.

No young man who is trying to succeed in business or in a profession can ever expect to play pool like De Oro, or billiards like young Hoppe, or golf like Travis, or chess like Lasker, or walk like the professional pedestrians.

As in any game requires peculiar physical characteristics which few possess. And even when it is attained, it is worth nothing to a man unless he expects to make his livelihood out of it.

Our "office champion," spending all his leisure time rolling balls around a billiard or pool table, puzzling out intricate chess problems, or madly walking ten-mile stretches, uses up the energy that he ought to be spending on his work.

Instead of trying to improve himself and earn promotion, he neglects his duties and wastes his employer's time dreaming about outstripping his fellows in some idle diversion.

Every man needs recreation. Golf, billiards, pool, chess are not harmful when played SIMPLY AS RECREATIONS, but as soon as they begin to claim the attention of a man in business hours they become dangerous vices.

It was Herbert Spencer who said to a man who had brilliantly defeated him in billiards:

"To play billiards as I do is the pastime of a gentleman. To play it as you do is evidence of a wasted youth."

A member of the metropolitan police force is a champion hammer-thrower, and because of that he never will be more than an average policeman.

If the young man who holds five championships would devote to his business half the brains and energy he devotes to play, he would soon be one of the ablest men in the office where he works.

But his devotion to silly "office championships" will win for him no real championship, and will, in the course of a few years, destroy every chance he has of a prosperous or a contented future.

Let Congress
Investigate the Sugar Trust

We have insisted, in the face of much opposition, that Congress ought to go to the bottom of the iniquity of the Sugar Trust.

We are now confident that this counsel will prevail.

If Representative Campbell of Kansas should fail to get for his investigation resolution the Speaker's attention in the House, Senator Borah of Idaho or Senator Culberson of Texas will no doubt take the necessary initiative.

And the sentiment of the country will make it politically unsafe for either Senators or Representatives to oppose this measure.

It is all very well to say that the Department of Justice has ample power to prosecute the charges against the "men higher up." But the facts in the case are so intricate and so elusive that they never could be got at under the ordinary rules of evidence in court.

There is need of the exercise of the highest power of the nation to bring into the light the dark places in the character and career of this gigantic monopoly.

In the past, through a long series of years, the Sugar Trust has had power to clog the processes of ordinary justice.

It has violated the Sherman anti-trust law and controlled the prices of its commodity. It has conspired to ruin its competitors and has blacklisted the merchants that withstood its "crummy."

It has taken rebates from railroads, and used short weights at the custom house. It has bribed government officials and violated the tariff laws. It has imported contract labor and secured the appointment of its own agents in the public service.

It is impossible to frame such a multitude of charges in ordinary indictments or to establish them by ORDINARY LEGAL METHODS.

And it is to be borne in mind that the investigation that is proposed will light up the diverse ways not only of the Sugar Trust, but of ALL OTHER GREAT MONOPOLIES.

It will educate the country in a clearer understanding of the need of the public regulation of all the great combinations that are controlling the prices of the necessities of life and increasing the cost of every man's living.

It is unreasonable to suppose that the lawlessness and recalcitrance that have infested the administration of the Sugar Trust are wholly peculiar to that institution.

Rather they may be assumed to characterize all concerns that are subject to the like temptations and endowed with a like unregulated power.

After we have thoroughly learned the way around in the noisome labyrinths of the Sugar Trust, it is possible that the like investigation in other cases may safely be turned over to the Bureau of Corporations in the Department of Commerce and Labor.

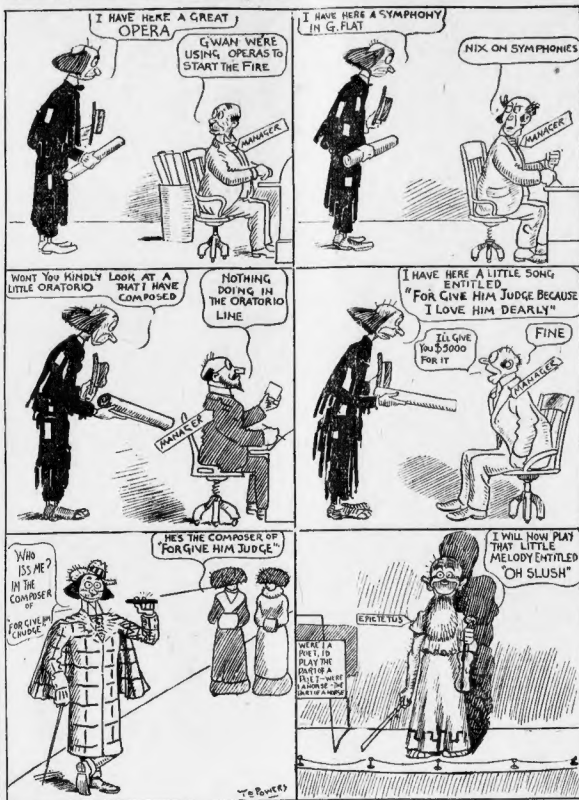

The American insists that the instruction and warning that should go with the study of this conspicuous corporate pervert demand a searching and exhaustive investigation at the hands of the National Legislature.

For it is to Congress that we must look for the enactment of the laws that shall, in due time, MAKE SUCH MONSTROSITIES IMPOSSIBLE.
